Re-Ignite Your Passion for Your Work

Do you remember why you went into Human Resources? Or do you get a pit in your stomach every Sunday night, knowing Monday morning is just one sleepless night away? We all know engaged employees are happier employees, and happier employees are more productive. You have a right to be enthusiastic about your job. It's not too late to re-ignite that passion!

This interactive session will help you reflect on what drew you into the HR profession in the first place, and how your passion has grown or dwindled as your career evolved. It will take you through a process to reconnect your passion and your strengths with your daily job duties, and help you develop a roadmap to link your job to your purpose and passion again.

This presentation is for your personal development. The guidance from Claire Chandler will improve your personal effectiveness as an HR professional. In addition, this guidance will equip you with experiential learning so you can use the skills to coach staff in your organizations in re-igniting their own passion at work. Learn a new process as a HR consultant/mentor for staff development in your own organization.

Learning Objectives:

Upon completion of this presentation, you will be able to:

- Identify your purpose and passion at work to coach, consult, and provide guidance to your staff
- Build a roadmap toward that passion and purpose
- Close the gap by making some key choices.

About the Speaker:

Claire Chandler, president of Talent Boost, has more than 20 years of experience in corporate and consulting roles, ranging from communications and marketing to leadership development. She has extensive experience in organizational development and effectiveness, and works with companies and individuals on tapping into their unique talents to achieve success.
